THE OFFICIAL SEAL
SPRING HILL COLLEGE
MOBILE, ALABAMA

Dedication

This Year of Our Lord 1956 is the four-hundredth anniversary of the death of St. Ignatius of Loyola, founder of the Society of Jesus. Since Spring Hill has been administered and largely staffed by the Jesuits during almost its entire 126-year history, it is fitting that we join them in celebrating this memorial year.

But it would be altogether fitting even if Ignatius were not so intimately connected with our College. He is a saint for our times, and especially for young people going out into a world where they hope to do great things for God and their fellow men.

Ignatius had the spirit of youth throughout his life — so much so that, after his conversion from soldier-courtier to Man-of-God, in his thirties, he set himself to study with children in order to complete his primary education and thus fit himself for advanced studies. And young men flocked to his banner, the Banner of Christ the King, from out of universities throughout Europe.

And they still come, so that the saint's original, eight-strong group now numbers some 32,000 Jesuits throughout the world, all trained to the ideals of our saint — especially by the "Spiritual Exercises," which also form the basis of Catholic Retreat Work among both Catholic and non-Catholic laymen.

Having served a long "apprenticeship" at Spring Hill as student, teaching scholastic, and Dean of the College, Father Andrew Cannon Smith, S.J., might have been expected to be entirely familiar with the needs of the College when he became President in 1952 — and to have definite plans for meeting those needs.

We have been privileged to see Spring Hill grow and flourish under his leadership as he and the rest of the faculty — both Jesuits and laymen — worked to make us proud of our College.

On the physical side, we have a new residence hall and greatly improved classroom facilities, plus other improvements too numerous to mention here. Others are underway as we write, and still more are being planned. Among the twenty-eight Jesuit colleges and universities of the United States, and the 5211 schools taught by Jesuits throughout the world, Spring Hill can lift her head proudly. Especially since, under Father Smith's direction, Spring Hill is having a moral as well as an educational influence — setting an example which is respected if not as yet widely followed in this region. Our local communities and Christian fellowship cannot help but profit from the example we have seen set for us at Spring Hill — if we follow it and maintain the bonds which unite us in spirit with the true friends whom we have come to know "on the Hill."

JESUIT LAY BROTHERS

A special remembrance here of the men behind the scenes, our Jesuit lay brothers. Unassuming yet enormously efficient, they sustain the entire community with their work and prayers . . . "For the Greater Glory of God." Without them, Spring Hill could scarcely hold its own; with more of them, the College would certainly flourish.

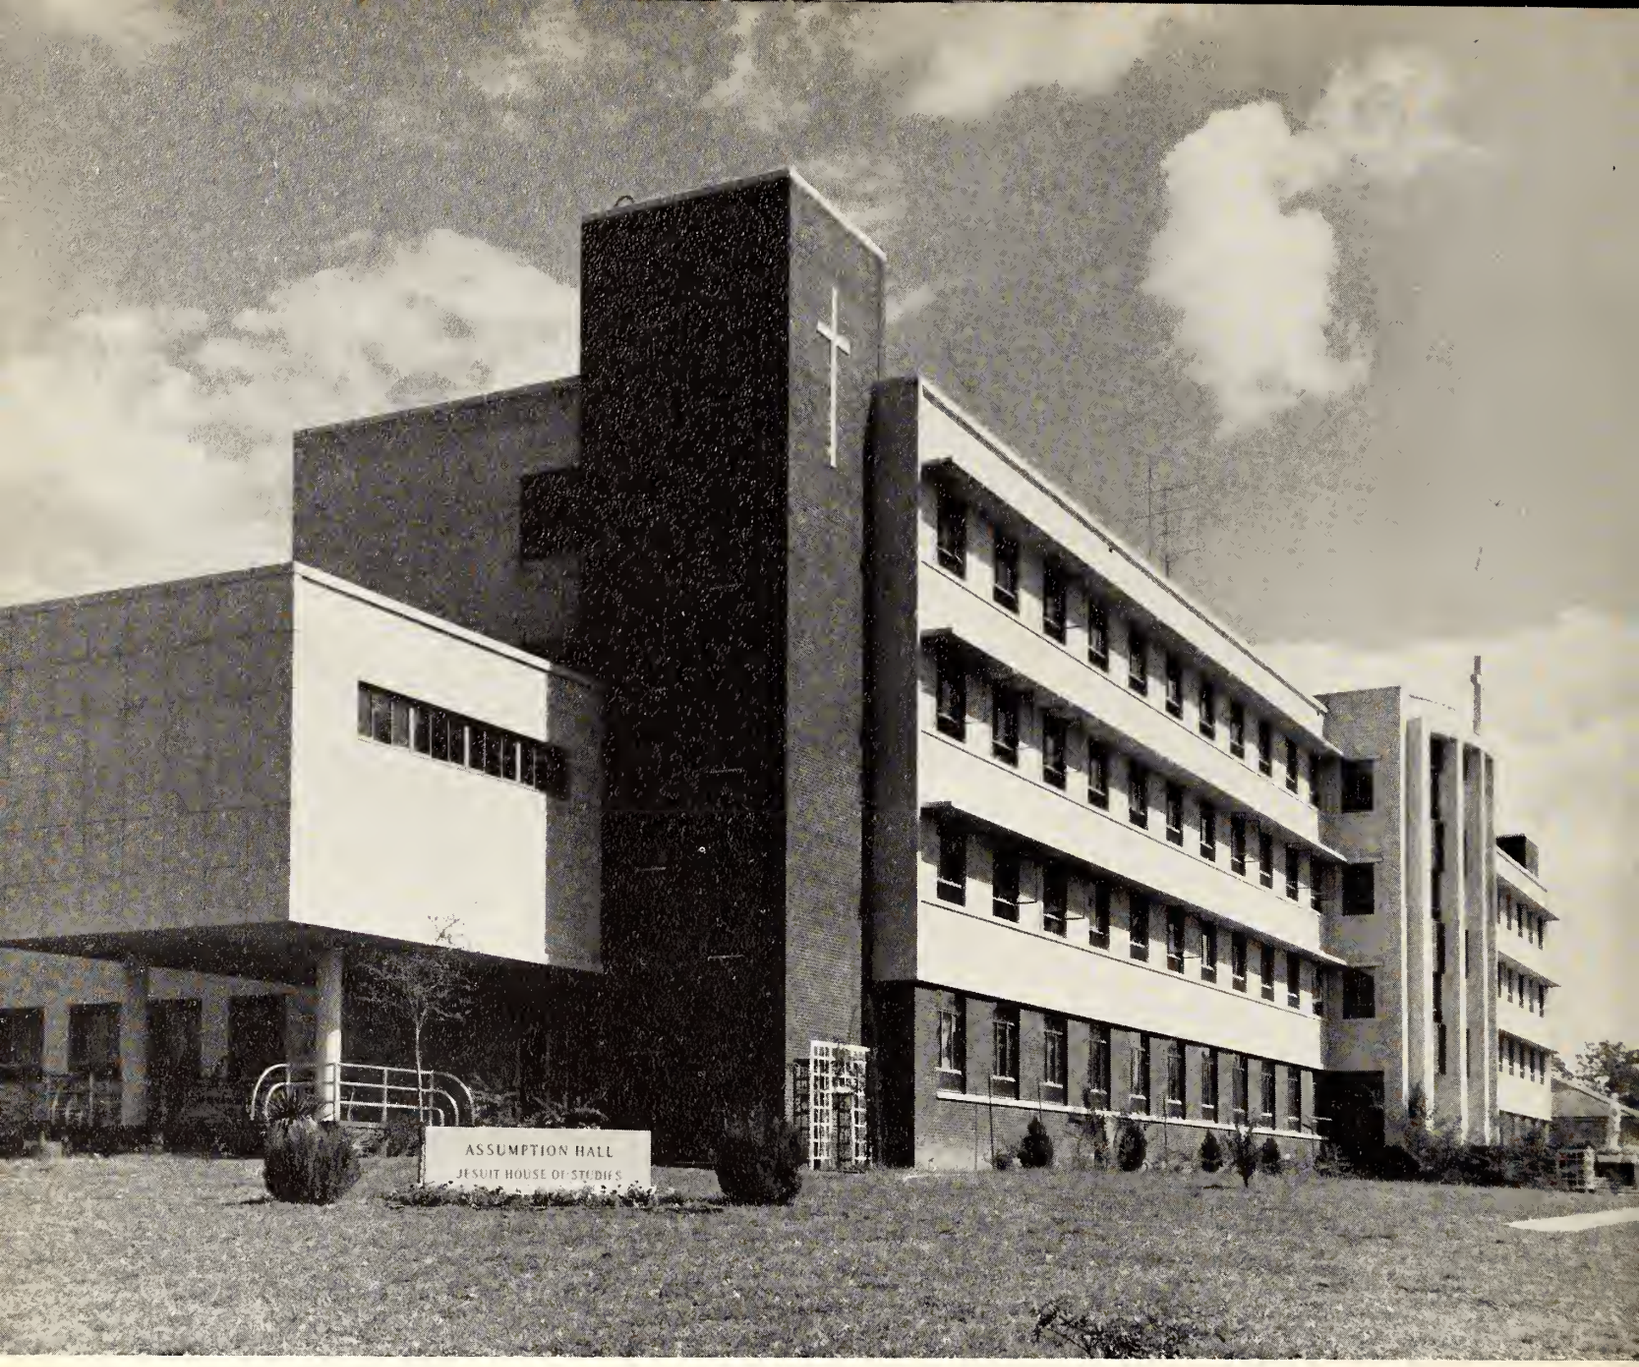
BROTHERS OF THE SACRED HEART

Those serious young students you've seen in their black suits, white shirts and black ties are Brothers of the Sacred Heart, preparing themselves for their lifetime work of teaching in such Catholic high schools as McGill Institute in Mobile. From their religious home just off campus, they "commute" here in search of A.B. and B.S. degrees.



In black suits with white clerical collors, those "Eager Beaver" students are Jesuits working for their college degrees. After finishing their course in Scholastic Philosophy and taking a degree in some other subject as well, they will spend three years teaching in some Jesuit high school before going on to the study of Theology and Ordination to the Priesthood. Eight years or more from now, a few of them may be back at the Hill, on the faculty. Before taking up residence in their gleaming white building (Assumption Hall) just off the campus, they have gone through two years of novice-ship, pronounced their perpetual vows in the Society of Jesus, and spent two years in classical studies. We're fortunate to have their example, and that of the Brothers.

St. Ignatius had a motto for his followers: "Work as though success depended entirely on your own efforts; but pray as though everything depended on God." Our faculty, whether Jesuit or non-Jesuit, has left no stone unturned in trying to arouse in us a striving toward the full, well-rounded Christian life. But much has depended on our own prayers and efforts. If those have lacked force, we can intensify them in the years ahead.

Another saying of St. Ignatius is quoted on the inside-cover design for this book: "How drab the earth when I consider the heavens." Which involves another apparent contradiction, since the saint was intensely concerned with improving and even radically reforming his world. Our teachers share that same concern, and we can delight them by allowing the germ of it to grow within us — by taking an active part in community projects, working ever toward a realization in this world of the Christian ideal of Brotherhood among all men.

If we should ever despair of attaining our ideals, all we need do is remember back to our days at the Hill, especially to the knowledge that we are frequently in the thoughts and prayers of teachers who have seen a large proportion of their students become respected and worthy representatives of Spring Hill.

Although we have divided our yearbook into many sections, we ourselves have not been divided at Spring Hill. Ignatian Education, being Christian education, is directed toward teaching us to harmonize all the aspects of our lives.

But the Spiritual forces are the foundation that underlies and supports the whole edifice of our education. They b r e a t h e life and energy and peace into all our activities. Without spirituality we are inhuman: physical without a soul, cultural wthout a goal, and academic without meaning.

We of the present, with 126 years of past students and faculty, are one community gathered in Christ's Name, and He is here in the midst of us. And we look to Him, and to the prayers and good works of our fellows, to keep us all close together throughout the years. We will not forget the Chapel, the Grotto, the statues, the little forest of crosses marking the graves of Jesuits who have given their lives to Spring Hill, our own teachers who showed us how to live in the world but not to belong to it.

We have lived together, studied together, prayed together, broken bread together, taken part together in the Eternal Sacrifice. And we shall stay together in spirit, no matter how far separated by space. Our deepest desire: to be loyal to the training we received on the Hill, and to all those friendships we shall treasure always.

The Choir sings at liturgical functions, following the ideals set down by St. Pope Pius X. We have found out, even if it took four years in the process, that "Knowledge makes a bloody entrance," even with the best of intentions and the persevering patience of our teachers. In so doing, we also have learned something about Ignatian Education: inflexible in its demand that we meet at least a respectable minimum of knowledge (those English Proficiency tests!), but ever optimistic that we should one day come to appreciate and seek the highest intellectual formation.

We have seen a good number of our classmates make giant strides in many branches of knowledge, and we're proud of them. And we feel confident that, even though we fell behind them, we can still hold our own with the products of other colleges.

More than that, our studies at the Hill have taught us our place in the Divine Scheme: all the wisdom of the past, and all the discoveries of the present or future, are but a fragment of the Divine Knowledge. God has given us intellect so that we might come to a knowledge of Him as well as of ourselves and the world about us. And we have learned that we are the dear children of God, who watches over us and cooperates with our efforts to solve His mysteries — leaving us always free, but never more free than when guided at the Hill toward a love for and a grasp of that true knowledge which alone can make us free.

After a whirlwind two years of independent existence, Phi Tau "went national," joining the recently organized Lambda Tau as its Gamma chapter and taking Biology Department members in with it as faculty members. As its objectives, the group unites students interested in Medical Technology as a career, and seeks to awake a similar interest in local high school students.

Lambda Tau was organized in Oklahoma as an honor society open to both coed and men students of Medical Technology.

We know that the adjoining photo of Charlie Joseph, Purple-and-White booster extraordinary, belongs on this page, because it represents the spirit behind competitive athletics at the Hill. That spirit is shared by the whole student body and faculty, and it overflows from our teams — especially when the going is tough.

Intercollegiate athletics were of course unknown in the days of St. Ignatius, although his closest friend, Francis Xavier, had quite a reputation as an athlete in his student years at the University of Paris. The colleges founded by Ignatius and his sons have preserved the Renaissance emphasis on physical recreation.

Competition fits into that tradition if it does not destroy the values which athletics bring to an educational program. Spring Hill athletics work toward "a sound mind in a sound body" and toward fostering that species of mutual respect known as sportsmanship.

A respectable program of intercollegiate competition in basketball, baseball, tennis and golf is balanced with a comprehensive intramural program (invaded this past year by the coeds). Varsity players are bona-fide students, respected as well in the classroom as in the gym, on the diamond, links, or tennis court. It is no accident that Spring Hill players are better known for their "savvy" than for their size.

When Happy Mahfouz walked off with his sheepskin in 1955, the prophets of doom predicted a disastrous 1955-56 season for Coach Bill Gardiner and his charges, but the skeptics were confounded once the season's first games were lost and forgotten.

Those first losses came on a road trip which pitted the Badgers against formidable opponents — too formidable for a green team still searching for the right combination. Then our boys began to click, knocking over the University of Miami and Washington State. They reached their peak by taking the Senior Bowl championship from nationally high-ranked Clemson and Memphis State.

Another road trip proved costly, resulting not only in losses but also in injuries to key players, and the rest of the season saw the Purple and White fighting gamely but outgunned. In the years to come, however, we'll remember this team as a GREAT team. In our books they were champions.

"Some 2000 fans had just seen one of the greatest exhibitions of clutch basketball. On that memorable Thursday night, they saw a team overcome a great basketball aggregation that was an odds-on favorite. With less than eight minutes left, anyone in the crowd would have admitted that Memphis State had won the Senior Bowl Tournament for the second straight year.

"Yet, with the score reading 63-48, Memphis State began to play erratic ball for the first time that evening; while this was going on, Spring Hill began to hit with rivet-gun regularity. The Badgers stole the ball, made lay-ups from such contorted positions that even Houdini would have gasped. Jump-shots from everywhere, one-handed push-shots — all went in the bucket. And the crowd was going crazy.

"It was fantastic, impossible, but the buzzer sounded with the score in our favor, and exultant screams from bursting lungs cut the air. The pandemonium died down only after the presentation of trophies, then we filed towards the exits amid tears of joy and sadness.

"To you players, who showed us what it is to desire something with an unbeatable will, we say inadequately: "Thank you, Bobby, Bucky, Ed, Whitey, Jim, Gene — all of you, you're great. We're proud of you."

"The Spider" maneuvers for position against Sauffley Field.
Phelan plays Keep-Away against Brookley Field's veterans.

From this year's varsity basketball squad we lose three by graduation: Co-captains Bucky Poole and Jim McGuire, and reserve Jim Hasser. Prospects for next year would be dim indeed if it weren't for the record of this year's junior varsity team: 7 wins, 2 losses, against the best opposition obtainable.

As for the individual frosh who made up that team, another encouraging note is that they are, on the average, taller and heavier than Badgers usually are, and with no apparent loss in speed. And they caught on quickly to the Gardiner-style of offense and defense, with its emphasis on teamwork and fierce desire to excel.

The starting five included burly Jim Carney at the pivot post. Joe Phelan and Leroy handled the forward positions and often baffled opponents with their defensive play. Charlie Boyle and "Spider" Litekey were most adequate in the guard slots, and two hustling reserves — George Wetzel and Lennie Phillips — rounded out the Li'l Badger squad.

All in all, it isn't surprising that Coaches Gardiner and Napolitano haven't been noticeably worried over the tough 1956-57 schedule that lies ahead.

A traditionally strong Hill links squad bowled over most opposition again this year, winning eight matches and losing two. But one of those losses was the first on our home links since 1939. It came at the hands of North Texas, 13-14, and the Texans went on to win the Southeastern Intercollegiate Championship.

The other was an unexplainable loss to Mississippi Southern at Hattiesburg, after the Badgers had taken the Southerners' measure in an earlier match.

Good news for 1957: we lose no one from this year's squad, and the freshmen more than carried their share of this year's load.

This year we have accorded the Hill's R.O.T.C. program a special section in our yearbook. The intention is not to isolate it from other activities, but simply to acknowledge that it occupies a place of special importance in life at Spring Hill, with roughly half of our full-time students engaged.

It is true that St. Ignatius abandoned a military career, after winning heroic distinction and suffering a shattered leg while leading the defense of Pamplona. But he retained an appreciation of the military virtues — so much so that he conceived his new Society as a military-type organization, organized along the lines of military command, with Christ as its leader into actions both defensive and offensive.

Thus it is not strange that a military organization should be at home on the campus of a Jesuit college, which appreciates healthy, directed discipline.

And we have been consistently fortunate, not only in having been given the services of dedicated gentlemen of the United States Army, but also in the outstanding results of their labor. It is with a thrill of pride that we take part in, or watch from Byrne Library, those reviews which are such an impressive demonstration of our solidarity and patriotism. And when we hear reports of how devotedly our R.O.T.C. graduates have served our country.

We pray only that their services will continue to be needed in peace, not in war.

There must surely be a better title for this section than "Cultural," but we haven't been able to discover it this year. At any rate, what we mean to convey by the title is this: in this section are included those organizations and activities which, e v e n though they might just as properly be included in the Academic Section, seem to have a stronger accent on "having fun" by providing entertainment as well as service.

The photo chosen for this page (Duncan Kelley working in the Band Instrument Room) illustrates a special aspect of what we have in mind. It shows that campus activities, of whatever sort, depend on the unselfish cooperation of individuals. Many of them, working long hours either alone or in groups, have during the past year provided a variety of services or entertainment which the general student body may have appreciated at the moment and then forgotten. A main purpose of this yearbook, the 1956 "Torch," is to see that a l l those man-and-or-coed-hours shall not really be forgotten.

Again, such activities have always been an integral part of Jesuit education—even ballet and opera were at one time flourishing in the European colleges. And the stacks of old yearbooks and newspapers in Byrne Library will show the inquisitive reader that Spring Hill's student organizations have contributed substantially to our alumni's store of happy, worthwhile memories.

CULTURAL

On this and following pages we present the Hill's favorite coeds, as chosen by campus balloting. The voting was heavy, and a host of coeds were nominated. Results of the contest were first announced at half-time during our first home basketball game, and nine radiant girls with chrysanthemum bouquets and handsome escorts were presented to the audience.

Escorted by Student Council President Bob Halpin was MARCELLE COWAN, Miss Torch of 1956, joining a long line of campus queens, which includes a former Miss America.

A Mobile senior, one of the Hill's original group of full-time coeds who brightened our campus in the fall of 1952, Marcelle has taken part in a host of activities. To mention only those which come to mind immediately, she has been an R.O.T.C. sponsor for four years, Sweetheart of Phi Kappa, active in Chi Rho, perennial class officer, and active in the Day Students Sodality, Glee Club, etc., etc.

MISS TORCH ... 1956

FAVORITES

MARY WILLIAMS, above, is one of the many freshman "Favorites" who dominated the voting for Miss Torch. In her case, the winning combination seems to have been brunette beauty and a Continental poise acquired in the years she spent in Europe with her Air Force father and family. A Brookley Field Mobilian, she has been active in Yenni and in the Glee Club.

MARIE ZIBILICH, of New Orleans, a sophomore, is a repeater from last year's beauty section. An R.O.T.C. sponsor, Marie was Queen of the R.O.T.C. Ball in her freshman year. She has been active in Yenni Dramatics Society, and has contributed her services to the SPRINGHILLIAN, the 1955 TORCH, and many other activities.

IRENE DOBBIN, Mobile freshman, has followed in the tracks of her sister Joan, who was graduated last year. Irene was an Omicron maid-of-honor at this year's Pan-Hellenic Ball. She is also an R.O.T.C. sponsor, and has contributed her services to many organizations while floating shyly hither and yon about the campus.

F A V O R I T E S

BILLIE JO MULLINS, another Mobile freshman, is our candidate for the special title of Miss More Bounce to the Ounce. Band sponsor in the R.O.T.C., Billie Jo has also put an energetic best foot forward in such activities as the Glee Club, SPRINGHILLIAN, and Yenni. She ruled as Omicron Sigma's Sweetheart at this year's Pan-Hellenic, and was a maid-of-honor at the R.O.T.C. Ball.

LYNN FOOTE is a welcome Houston gift to this year's crop of freshman coeds. As is the case with others in this section, her popularity is also attested to by her being chosen as an R.O.T.C. sponsor. Lynn has made history by being the SPRINGHILLIAN'S first fashion writer, and has been active in other organizations such as the Glee Club, Chi Rho, and the Sodality.

F A V O R I T E S

HELEN MUSCAT, a Mobile Senior, is another of that original band of Spring Hill coeds. Helen was MISS TORCH in 1955, "Cover Girl" of the 1953 TORCH, and member of Miss Torch's court in 1954. So she has touched all such bases. While preparing for a teaching career, Helen has served as Sodality prefect, class and Student Council officer, and was an R.O.T.C. sponsor this year.

MARY JO BUTLER, freshman from Fort Myers, Florida, has cut quite a swath here with her diminutive brunette beauty. Mary Jo has been active with Yenni and in other activities, and was Queen of this year's R.O.T.C. Ball. An R.O.T.C. Band Sponsor, she also was active in Chi Rho, The Sodality, and on the SPRINGHILLIAN Staff. Chi Rho's "Cutest Couple" awards went to her and George Steger.

This year's debate team, though including two freshmen and one sophomore, compiled a creditable record in tournament competition, capping it with 2nd place in our own highly regarded Azalea Tourney—the first time a Hill team has placed so high in our local matching of wits and rhetoric. Congratulations to Father Walsh, their moderator, to the team, and to the host of students and faculty who helped make our tournament a success. And congratulations to Notre Dame, which finally took first place after years of running second—took it with a vengeance, as its team placed 1, 2, 3, 4 in the individual rankings.

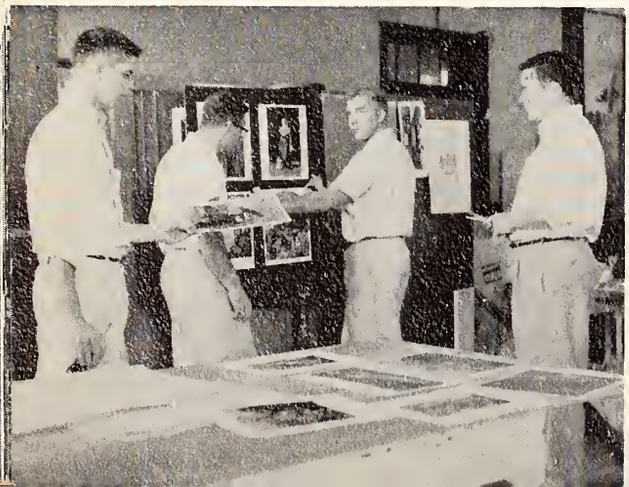
RAPHAEL ART GUILD



Organized last year, the Raphael Art Guild has as its objective the promotion of talent among its members, as well as making its members' services available to campus organizations which need help in preparing publicity displays. Principal projects this year were sketching trips, and preparing posters for such activities as Yenni plays, PINAFORE, and campus elections.

Only one issue of the Hill's literary magazine appeared this past year, but it was worth waiting for, with its wide variety of articles written by a good cross-section of the campus literates.

A special feature in this issue was an editorial explanation of the purposes and processing behind submission and publication. Thus we can finish filling this space by quoting briefly:

"It is the duty of an editor . . . to conduct a private criticism of the material submitted, selecting that which is suitable for publication and rejecting that which is not. The duty of a MOTLEY editor is to select that which is potentially good, rejecting only that which has no value whatever, since the MOTLEY has in mind the encouragement of potentially good writers."

VETERANS CLUB

Since its start here a few years ago, the Veterans Club has kept up a steady parade of picnics and other social events designed to provide social recreation for members and their families. Even though not as numerous as in the years immediately following World War II, the veterans still make up a substantial percentage of the Hill's enrollment, and have earned the respect of all for their serious application to study in spite of the ordinary difficulty of having to work part-time.

This section originally was intended to give a rather thorough word picture of the year's activities, to fill out the picture "picture." That idea fell through, but we have still effected another objective of this section—to give our advertisers their "Money's Worth" by inserting a good number of interesting (we hope) pictures among the ads which those friends, trusting in your patronage, have contracted for.

If we had run that detailed diary, we would have dwelt on some of the following highlights: Moving into the new, bright, cool Quinlan Hall classrooms, which have also cut down somewhat on the problem of getting to classes scattered all over the campus . . . Our inspired cage team's winning the Senior Bowl Championship over highly-regarded Memphis State, Clemson, and Miami—especially the manner of their winning it . . . The Golf Course improvements, such as terracing and water-lines, which are turning our layout into a top collegiate attraction . . . The Golf Team's near-win over North Texas State, which went on to win the Southern Intercollegiate and tie for 2nd in the National . . .

But most noteworthy of all, of course, was the spirit of friendliness all over the campus—with the usual grumbling (more good-natured even than usual) over class assignments, tough-marking prof's, the English Proficiency tests, and Ma Bare's cooking. May that Spring Hill Spirit be with us always.
